SO MANY THINGS!

Happy New Year, Homemakers!

I wanted to first say thank you to each of you for your grace in the fact that we have not had a newsletter or much communication since December. If you haven't heard, the girls and I were involved in a car wreck before Christmas, and I have been off work since then. Today is my first day back in the office, and a letter to you all is the first task at hand. This newsletter is full of VERY important information! Please, please take a moment to look over what is in here.

Here's the highlight:

- BAZAAR Application! If you are interested in being a vendor, DO NOT hesitate on this. We filled up by 1:30 p.m. on DAY ONE in the fall!
- State Meeting Information! They are changing the pricing for KEHA State Meeting, and more information is inside.
- Upcoming Events and more!

As always, thank you for what each of you do,

Dayna Fentress
Dayna, FCS Agent

This one is a little outdated, and Grayson has already grown faster than I'm okay with, but it's a pretty good personality picture of my crew! We hope you all have the best 2023!

February Homemaker Lesson

ELEMENTS AND PRINCIPLES OF
ART
VOCABULARY
2022 – 2023 CULTURAL ARTS AND HERITAGE • KEHA STATE SUPPORTED LESSON

The visual arts are among the most sophisticated forms of human communication, at once shaping and shaped by the social context in which they find expression. Humans have created objects of beauty and significance for thousands of years (Stokstad, 1995). Examples of cave paintings dating back more than 10,000 years provide a glimpse into our primitive world, as we view not only what is depicted, but also the way it is depicted.

Our involvement with art may be intense or casual, naïve, or sophisticated. As viewers, we actively participate in the re-creation of the work, and the meaning changes from person to person. We may react instinctively to a painting or photograph and get a “feeling” of knowing what we like, while our opinions as to what constitutes art changes over time (Stokstad, 1995).

But how do we know which “art” is worthy of our attention, and how do we know when we have found it? Sachant, et al. (2016) suggest the decision about “what art is best” belongs to the individual. There is specific vocabulary that enables us to analyze and process what we see. And when we enhance our “visual literacy,” we raise our awareness of the powerful images that surround us (Sachant, et al., 2016). The “elements and principles” of art provide that vocabulary we can use to engage in meaningful conversations about what we view in our artistic world.

ELEMENTS OF ART

Line, shape, form, space, texture, value, and color are the physical or visual components with which a work of art is created. Here, the terms are defined as they relate to visual arts.

Figure 1

LINE:

defined by a point moving in space; usually a long, narrow mark or band

Outline: the lines by which a figure (or shape) is defined in; the sum of these lines forms the contour of the figure

Figure 2

SHAPE:

two-dimensional, flat, or limited to height and width

Geometric: comprised of points, lines, angles, and figures used in geometry, usually with straight lines or regular shapes

Organic: created from shapes that are irregular or asymmetrical in appearance and having a curvy flow to them; also referring to shapes found in nature

Figure 3

FORM:

three-dimensional, enclosing volume; includes height, width, and depth; sculpture, performance art and crafts (e.g., knitting) are all three-dimensional

SPACE:

the area around, between, and within shapes or forms

Composition: the arrangement or positioning of elements within the pictorial space

TEXTURE:

the way things feel, or look like they might feel, if touched; the tactile or perceived surface quality of an object; texture can be real or implied

VALUE:

the relative lightness or darkness of a color that can be used to define form (a color's value changes when white or black is added)

COLOR:

the property of an object that is produced when light strikes it and is reflected and viewed by the eye

Hue: the actual color

Chroma: intensity of the color

Value: lightness or darkness of the color
